BUSH MUST BE PROSECUTED

Law School Dean Says War Criminals Have to Be Punished

President Bush may think that his departure from office next January will shield him from the wrath of those millions of people he has harmed during his presidency. But think again, says the dean of the Massachusetts School of Law, who warns the president that he will be hounded to the ends of the Earth for the multitude of war crimes he and his cronies have committed since 2001. SHOCKING REVELATION: U.S. POWS STILL IN LAOS

AFP & others have said it for years; now proof emerges U.S. soldiers still held in Southeast Asian camps

John McCain, the U.S. government and the mainstream media may want to sweep it under the rug forever, but AFP is still keeping the MIA/POW issue alive. And recently, compelling evidence has been found to justify the claim that U.S. soldiers are even now languishing in Laotian slave labor camps.

PERSONAL FROM THE EDITOR

EDUCATION PROJECT

I HOPE YOU WILL BUY A BUNCH of our brand new 8-page Bilderberg 2008 reports and give copies to your neighbors, leave them at barber shops, lunch counters and other locations so more people can be educated about this evil bunch.

You will enjoy the copy you get for yourself, too. It will have fresh information as global bureaucrats have already jumped at Bilderberg orders. It will have the complete list of attendees, including those positively identified but kept off Bilderberg's own list. It also contains some of the reporting you have already read on this year's meeting.

In 30 years of pursuing Bilderberg, I have talked to literally thousands of individuals who had never heard of the world shadow government. This includes crowds at the gates of Bilderberg resorts who are curious about the strange activities taking place, public forums, radio and TV shows and casual conversations.

When American patriots learn that high officials from the White House, state, defense and treasury departments and other major Washington bureaucrats are plotting with heads of state and other high officials from Europe, along with international financiers, to eliminate national sovereignty, they are outraged.

Unanimously, people agree with AFP that Bilderberg is doing evil work. Whether they call themselves liberal, conservative or even communist, all say that Bilderberg should be exposed and de-fanged. If you give a copy of the Bilderberg 2008 Report to an interested friend, you can be confident you have created a convert. Despite the recent surge in exposure of Bilderberg, more than 90 percent of Americans have never even heard the word.

Exposure will kill Bilderberg and they are, as you will read, on the ropes now. Let us keep the heat on the bad boys.

To get your Bilderberg 2008 report, see the advertisement on page 4 of this issue. We could not afford this year to include it along with an issue of the newspaper, but whatever number you order, we'll match that number of copies for free. Buy one, get one free. Buy 10, get 10 free etc. Thanks for supporting AFP.

NOTE: Because of the Fourth of July, there will be no AFP issue next week. Look forward to a double issue the week after that.

Israel-Firster Feith a No Show at Court

Former Deputy Secretary of Defense Douglas Feith, a Bilderberg luminary, was scheduled to testify before a House Judiciary subcommittee but failed to appear. His lawyer said Feith would not sit alongside another witness, Lawrence Wilkerson, who had been chief of staff to then-Secretary of State Colin Powell. Why? The lawyer said Wilkerson had accused Feith of being a "card-carrying member of the Likud Party whose allegiance is to Israel rather than the United States," The Washington Post reports. (Actually, according to George Packer's book, The Assassin's Gate, it was Powell who made that allegation to President Bush in the Oval Office in January, 2005, the Post said.

HUGE VICTORY FOR GUN OWNERS

The Supreme Court shot down restrictions on hand guns in a 5-4 decision this week. This is a huge victory for gunowners and the Second Amendment. While AFP is often critical of President Bush, we have him to thank for the Supreme Court's ruling favoring gun owners. If Sen. John Kerry had been elected president in 2004, Chief Justice John Roberts and Justice Samuel Alito would not be on the bench right now. With Kerry appointees, the D.C. gun ban would have been upheld, and the second amendment dead on arrival. This ruling means that gun shops could possibly return to the District of Columbia.

CARTOONIST ARRESTED FOR 'HATE'

A Dutch political cartoonist was arrested on suspicion of insulting people because of their race or religion through his work, authorities said. The cartoonist, who works under the pen name Gregorius Nekschot, was arrested on suspicion of violating hate speech laws and held overnight before being released, a spokeswoman for his publisher, Uitgeverij Xtra, said. "He was arrested with a great show of force, by around 10 policemen," the spokeswoman said. Amsterdam public prosecutor spokeswoman Sanne van Meteren said Nekschot remains a suspect in a criminal investigation. "We suspect him of insulting people on the basis of their race or belief, and possibly also of inciting hate," she said. Each is a crime punishable by up to a year in prison under Dutch hate speech laws, or two years for multiple offenses.

Captain Who Fought for Truth About USS Liberty Attack Dies

WARD BOSTON left an indelible footprint on the sands of time by vigorously investigating Israel's deliberate attack on the USS Liberty on June 7, 1967 that killed 34 crew members and wounded more than 170. Boston, 84, died June 12, just five days after the 41st anniversary of the attack. In 2002, Capt. Boston said President Lyndon Johnson and his defense secretary, Robert McNamara, told those leading the investigation to "conclude that the attack was a case of 'mistaken identity' despite overwhelming evidence to the contrary," according to a signed affidavit. (For information on an extensive special report on the Liberty, see page 19.)

O.J. SIMPSON CONFESSES

A memorabilia dealer who did business with O.J. Simpson for many years alleges in his new book that a groggy Simpson, high on marijuana, confessed to killing his ex-wife after he was acquitted. In his book, How I Helped O.J. Get Away With Murder, author Mike Gilbert also claims he helped his former friend wiggle out of the murder charges by suggesting how to bloat his hands so they wouldn't fit the notorious bloody gloves.

NOTE: Because of the Fourth of July, there will be no AFP issue next week. Look forward to a double issue the week after that.

STARVATION TIED TO DOLLAR

After witnessing food riots in several countries including Haiti, the Philippines and Egypt, the World Bank is now warning that the crisis in the decline of the U.S. dollar could result in worldwide starvation. The World Bank and its sister organization, the IMF, recently held meetings to address the issues of rising food and energy prices. The price of staple crops such as wheat, rice and corn have all risen, leading to an increase in overall food prices of 83 percent in the last three years, the World Bank said.

PRESIDENTIAL HOPEFUL

Ralph Nader, 73, an independent candidate for president, while speaking outside the White House, called for the impeachment of Bush and Cheney. Nader said the president has "dishonored the White House and brought a pattern of waste." Surrounded by a handful of supporters, Nader charged that the president and vice president are currently committing five impeachable offenses, on a daily basis, including: criminal use of offense against Iraq; condoned and approved systematic torture; arresting thousands of Americans and denying them habeas corpus, violating attorney-client privilege; signing 800 signing statements, precluding the president from actually having to follow the laws he signs; and systematic spying on Americans without judicial approval.

BARDOT NOT POLITICALLY CORRECT

A French court has fined former film star Brigitte Bardot 15,000 euros ($23,000) for inciting racial hatred. She was prosecuted over a letter published on her website that complained Muslims were "destroying our country by imposing their ways." It is the fifth time Ms. Bardot has been convicted over her controversial remarks about Islam and its followers. This is her heaviest fine so far. The French film idol, who is 73, was not in court to hear the ruling. The fine related to a letter she wrote in December 2006.

New Questions Arise About Obama's Citizenship

It now appears that Barack Obama is constitutionally ineligible for the office of president. John McCain's eligibility was established in 1964, when courts ruled Sen. Barry Goldwater was eligible although he was born in Arizona when it was a territory, not a state. McCain was born in the Panama Canal Zone when it was a U.S. territory.

And, even as the controlled media continues to ignore the ineligibility of Obama, it will not go away. While few doubt that the Democrats will manage to pull off his nomination, all remain poised to view the legal performance.

The first hurdle will be having Obama produce his birth certificate, which so far he has refused to do, and prove that he was born in Hawaii on August 4, 1961, as he has always claimed. There is speculation that his American mother may have brought him to Honolulu shortly after his birth in Kenya, but no proof of that has been shown.

According to the law on the books at the time of Obama's birth, the office of president requires that a candidate be a natural born citizen if the child was not born to two U. S. citizen parents. Since he was not, should it be proven that Obama was not born in Hawaii, as claimed, he is ineligible without further debate. But assuming that he was born there, he has another problem.

Barack Obama and his mother.

According to a legal researcher who has contacted AFP, U.S. law very clearly states: "If only one parent is a U.S. citizen at the time of one's birth, that parent must have resided in the United States for a minimum of 10 years, five of which must be after the age of 16." And therein lies Obama's new problem.

Barack Obama's father was never a U.S. citizen.

Interestingly, there isn't much paperwork on the marriage of Obama's parents, and this has a few researchers speculating that it never took place at all. On page 27 of Obama: From Promise to Power, David Mendell writes: "Obama later confessed that he never searched for the government documents on the marriage, although Madelyn (Obama's maternal grandmother) insisted they were legally married." He also notes that Obama's father apparently was not legally divorced from his first wife back in Kenya at the time, a point of contention that ultimately led to their separation. This also would suggest that there may never have been any legal marriage by Obama's parents at all, but the Constitution does not ban an illegitimate child from the White House, as long as he was born inside the U.S.

Obama's mother was born in Kansas and was only 18 when Obama was born. This means even though she satisfies the citizen requirement for 10 years, she was not a citizen for at least five years prior to Barack Obama's birth. In essence, the mother alone is not old enough to qualify her son for automatic U.S. citizenship. At most, two years elapsed from his mother turning 16 to the time of Barack Obama's birth when she was 18. His mother would have needed to have been $16 + 5 = 21$ years old at the time of Barack Obama's birth for him to be a natural-born citizen. Barack Obama was already three years old at the time his mother turned 21.

Technically, Obama should have been naturalized as a citizen, but that, of course, would disqualify him from holding the office of president. If these allegations are accurate, America could install in January of 2009 a new president who is not even a U.S. citizen, neither born nor naturalized.

It should be demanded that Obama produce his 1961 Hawaiian birth certificate.

If he cannot satisfactorily do so, he should be deemed immediately ineligible to hold the office of president. ★

U.S. GOVERNMENT SILVER MORGAN SILVER DOLLARS: A TIME TESTED MONEY MAKER FOR OVER 130 YEARS

SINCE 2001, SILVER IS UP 212% AND ON A STAMPEDE TO $100 AN OZ. The Morgan Silver Dollar was authorized by the Bland-Allison Act on February 28, 1878. Designed by George T. Morgan, a talented British engraver, who recruited Philadelphia school teacher Anna Willers Williams to pose for the new design.

Morgan dollars were struck from 1878 through 1904, at the Philadelphia, New Orleans, San Francisco and Carson City Mints. Carson City production was very low and ended in 1893. Call for Carson City Specials.

1921 was the final year of minting. More than 270 million Morgans were melted under the Pittman and Silver Act of 1942. Smart money investors continue to build wealth with Morgan Dollars, the most actively traded of all U. S. coins.

The economy of today and the future will be as different as day and night. The changes will be more dramatic than at any other time in U.S. history. Protect your financial survival against the Fed. They will keep the printing presses rolling. The only question is "How far will the dollar dive?"

Since a low in 2001, gold is up 183% and silver is up 212%. For 25 years we have not seen a market as strong in precious metals and rare coins as today.

AT DEALER COST

The dollar has been car-jacked by the Fed's reckless policy of printing more money at a faster pace than in any other time in history. Oil prices at record highs fuel the fire of inflation. The housing crisis is the worst in 50 years. Silver is the hard money you need to protect your money!

You have life insurance, home owners insurance, car insurance, and medical insurance. Do you have money insurance? Gold, silver and platinum are hard money insurance that will preserve your wealth and insure the value of your money. The more you have in gold and silver, the less buying power you lose as the dollar continues to crumble!

Investing in silver is what smart money has been doing for years. We believe silver can and will hit its old high of $50 an ounce as it stampedes to $100 an oz. Tremendous profits can be made because gold on its way to $1500 an oz will lead silver to $100-$200 an oz. Order now and depend on the reliability and proven success of silver. Invest in your future with silver. Put your money to work and insure your wealth with silver's profitable track record. Friend, the only thing worse than failure is regret. Call Now!

Dean of U.S. Law School Says Bush Must Be Prosecuted

THE DEAN OF A NEW ENGLAND law school announced that the departure of President Bush next January may not provide him and his cronies with a sanctuary from justice. The message from Lawrence Velvel, dean and co-founder of the Massachusetts School of Law, is: Where impeachment ends, an independent tribunal begins. Punishment of the guilty is being openly discussed by conference planners—including capital punishment.

As announced on the website AfterDowningStreet.org, and confirmed for AFP by Dean Velvel, his assistant, Jeff Demers, and longtime publicist Sherwood Ross, a conference [see conference agenda on page 5—Ed.] is being called for by Velvel “to plan the prosecution of President Bush and other high administration officials for war crimes.” It will be held Sept. 13-14 at the school, a small, respected institution in Andover founded in 1988 that resisted the regulations and standards of the American Bar Association and instead sought accreditation through the New England Association of Schools and Colleges.

Specifying what may shock readers of independent media—but which will never appear in the prostitute press—Velvel said the program “is not intended to be a mere discussion of violations of law that have occurred. It is, rather, intended to be a conference at which plans will be laid and necessary organizational structures set up, to pursue the guilty as long as necessary and, if need be, to the ends of the Earth” as stated in his column posted online June 24, on his “Velvel on National Affairs” blog.

Dean of the Massachusetts School of Law, Lawrence Velvel has vowed to pursue war criminals like George W. Bush, Dick Cheney and Donald Rumsfeld “to the ends of the Earth.” Velvel believes punishing these evil-doers would send a strong message to future presidents.

“We must try to hold the Bush administration leaders accountable in courts of justice,” Velvel said. “And we must insist on appropriate punishments, including, if guilt is found, the hangings visited upon top German and Japanese war criminals in the 1940s. America’s chief prosecutor at Nuremberg, Justice Robert Jackson, said we were invoking principles that would govern our nation as well as our defeated enemies. We must attempt to make a truth teller of Jackson, instead of allowing our leaders to make a liar of him.”

Velvel said this conference is intended to do away with the past practice of allowing U.S. officials responsible for war crimes (in Vietnam and elsewhere) to enjoy immunity from prosecution upon leaving office. “President [Lyndon] Johnson retired to his Texas ranch, and Defense Secretary Robert McNamara (a longtime Council on Foreign Relations fixture who also served in that position under JFK) was named to head the World Bank; Richard Nixon retired to San Clemente, and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger [a Bilderberg luminary] was allowed to grow richer and richer,” Velvel said, while citing former Kennedy/Johnson Secretary of State Dean Rusk as another unpunished wrong-doer.

“For Bush, Richard Cheney, Donald Rumsfeld and [torture advocate and Bush advisor] John Yoo to spend years in jail or go to the gallows for their crimes would be a powerful lesson to future U.S. leaders,” Velvel said.

The issues to be handled at the conference include the nature of domestic and international crimes committed; which high-level Bush officials, members of Congress and federal judges are chargeable with war crimes; and which foreign and domestic tribunals can be used to prosecute them.

“It is for all these reasons that I have called [the] conference . . . entitled Planning for the Prosecution of High-Level American War Criminals. . . . The underlying law and facts will be discussed in the context of laying plans to pursue the guilty in courtrooms so that in the future there may be no more Vietnams, no more Iraqs,” Velvel said. AFP interviewed Velvel June 24.

An “umbrella coordinating committee” also will be put together consisting of those from noted legal groups concerned about war crimes, including the American Civil Liberties Union and Center for Constitutional Rights.

New York attorney Carl Person questioned if this conference will lead to real results. He wondered if subpoena power will be achieved. “There is no convening authority. Nobody has to come to testify,” he said, though he agrees justice should be sought. ★

Building Wisdom Without Pain

Most people acquire wisdom slowly, over their lifetimes. They do it by making mistakes. That is, they make wrong decisions. When results turn out badly (hopefully not fatally) they remember not to make that bad decision again. The worse the pain, the better they remember. It's a sort of conditioned reflex.

The essence of wisdom is predictability. If our ideas about the world are accurate enough we can make wise (predictable) decisions. There is a field of study that helps us know whether or not our ideas are accurate enough. It is called General Semantics. It can be taught, and has been, in high schools.

Joseph Phelps, MS, PE, has written a book that will help you develop more personal wisdom, and teach it to your maturing children. Phelps, a Caltech graduate now approaching 85, has been studying and writing about this for more than 60 years. The book is . . .

Conference Agenda:

By Mark Anderson

Topics to be discussed at the Velvel conference, Sept. 13-14 and subjects on which plans will be laid, include:

- Introductory remarks stressing that war crimes have occurred twice in 40 years—in Vietnam and Iraq—and that perpetrators should be punished (as occurred at Nuremberg and Tokyo in 1946).
- A discussion of his recent book, The Torture Team, by Philippe Sands, including how executive branch lawyers failed in their duties (yet remained in power or gained soft landings).
- What domestic and international crimes were committed, which facts show crimes under which laws, and what punishments are possible.
- What high-level executive officials (and federal judges and legislators too, if any) are chargeable with crimes.
- What international tribunals, foreign tribunals and domestic tribunals (if any) can be used, and how to begin and prosecute cases in front of them.
- What cases have already been brought, with what results.
- What must be done to make prosecutions an issue in the 2008 political campaign and to have the question become a significant subject in the media.
- Creating an umbrella coordinating committee with representatives from the various—and increasing number of—organizations that are involved in cases.
- Creating a place to keep track of and organize compilations of relevant briefs, articles, books, opinions, facts, etc.
- The possibility of having a chief prosecutor's office à la Nuremberg. ★

The public is invited to the conference, to be held at 500 Federal Street in Andover, Mass., from 10 a.m. until 4:30 on Sept. 13 and 14. Anyone who wants to attend should contact Jeff Demers, at demers@msslaw.edu or at (978) 681-0800.

Attack on Iran Would Finish Off America

By Willis A. Carto

Will boy Bush order an attack on Iran before the end of his term? Doubtless, his neo-con, Israel-first controllers would like this, but they must realize the consequences and have reason to fear a backlash.

Although an attack would constitute the worst foreign policy blunder in American history—even worse than our needless intervention in the European wars of 1914 and 1939 which made them “world” wars, Israel ardently wants its colony—the United States—to attack Iran with a nuclear barrage and destroy its infrastructure, not to mention millions of Persians.

This would give Israel effective control of the entire Mideast theater, a major steppingstone toward its universal goal.

As for this country, an attack on Iran would be:

- Another unconstitutional war, undeclared by Congress,
- Another no-win war, and it would result in an unsupportable cost of at least a trillion dollars,
- The destruction of the buying power of the dollar internationally and the end of the dollar as the world's exchange currency,
- Frightful inflation here at home,
- The end of U. S. political influence around the globe,
- Probable terrorism inside the U.S., compliments of Iran and its Muslim radical allies,
- With terrorism the imposition of martial law by the federal government,
- With martial law, the summary arrest and incarceration

Such events would create revolutionary conditions resulting in either a dictatorship or the breaking up of America into separate geographical areas.

The above may sound far-fetched and extreme, but the destruction of America is very much on the agenda of “our traditional enemy,” to use the phrase of leading historical revisionist, David Irving. Patriotic Americans are warned. ★

GUTSY ISLAMIC LEADERS SAY KORAN DOES NOT SUPPORT KILLING OF INNOCENT CIVILIANS

Criticism by Muslim Theologians Said to Be Weakening al Qaeda

By Richard Walker

There is a growing belief in western security circles that al Qaeda is being so badly damaged by theological attacks from some of its former allies and mentors that it may self-destruct. How much of that belief is based on wishful thinking rather than hard facts?

It is true there has been a heated theological debate about al Qaeda on jihadist websites and on major media outlets across the Arab world, including al-Jazeera. This is because al Qaeda has not only brought the U.S. and its allies into wars in Afghanistan and Iraq, but has engaged in sectarian warfare against Muslims.

In Iraq, it has murdered thousands of Shiite Muslims, as well as Sunni Arabs, who have sided with the U.S. It has also sought weapons of mass destruction to kill tens of thousands of innocent Europeans and Americans.

There is now an open debate in which former al Qaeda allies and religious mentors have charged that Osama bin Laden and his deputy, Dr. Ayman al-Zawahiri, have strayed from the basic doctrines of Islam by killing Muslims whom they disagree with theologically, particularly Shiites, and also innocent Christians in Western countries. Critics have warned bin Laden that al Qaeda will bring untold destruction on Muslim lands should it explode a nuclear or biological weapon in an American or European city.

A reformed jihadist leader, who warned bin Laden before 9-11 that "intimidating" America would lead to the destruction of the Taliban, has asked al Qaeda to pursue what he referred to as a different path of jihad. He is Norman Benotman, now based in London, who was a leader of the "Libyan Islamic Fighting Group" until he became disillusioned with the use of terror following the attacks on the World Trade Center. He has successfully encouraged some of his former Libyan terrorist colleagues to break with al Qaeda.

Benotman has standing in the world of Islamic jihad because he can claim to have attended one of the most important international terrorist conferences before 9-11. It was held in the summer of 2000 in Kandahar, the birthplace of the Taliban, in Afghanistan. It was presided over by bin Laden and al-Zawahiri. Last November, Benotman was openly critical of the al Qaeda leaders in a letter published in the Arab media but virtually ignored by the U.S. media. He reminded them of the Kandahar meeting and how he warned them at that time of the potential consequences of their actions. He told them any "non-conventional" attack on America would lead to the occupation of the whole area and not just

OSAMA BIN LADEN

Is criticism of tactics by Muslims weakening al Qaeda?

AYMAN AL-ZAWAHIRI

Afghanistan.

In his letter, he pointed out that when it became apparent to him in 2000 that al Qaeda was seeking to acquire weapons of mass destruction, he told bin Laden that using such weapons would bring "more destruction, havoc and humiliation upon the Muslim and Arab worlds."

He tried to persuade bin Laden not to attack America but bin Laden told him there was a pending operation he could not abandon. That operation turned out to be the attack on the World Trade Center and Pentagon.

In his letter, Benotman informed al Qaeda that the only distinction between Arabs and non-Arabs was their piety. He was referring to the way bin Laden, as a Sunni Arab, was branding Shiite Muslims with whom he disagreed theologically as apostates who could be killed in accordance with his views of jihad and other tenets of the Koran.

Benotman's credibility as a critic of al Qaeda is rooted in the fact that in his letter he did not argue against jihad. In fact, he warned al Qaeda that its tactics were "fragmenting and internally draining Arab lands" and the outcome would be that Israel would have "control over the future of the region for 100 years."

Benotman was able to make statements like that in Europe but it is unlikely he would have been able to do so if he had been based in the United States. For example, his letter suggested that al Qaeda should dismantle its "Islamic State of Iraq" organization and fight alongside Sunni insurgents. He pleaded with bin Laden not to sow dissent among Palestinians and to support the mujahideen in Afghanistan, meaning the Taliban. Despite the fact he offered such inflammatory advice, security experts in the West saw his attacks on al Qaeda as something they could exploit to damage the al Qaeda brand name among young people in the Islamic world.

Benotman accused bin Laden and his deputy of reducing jihad to "mere terrorist and violent attacks, reflecting a state of anger, frustration, impotence and self expression."

Benotman's views alone would not be considered important if they were not linked to similar denunciations of al Qaeda by two powerful theological figures who were mentors to bin Laden's closest adviser, al-Zawahiri. One is Imam al-Sharif, also known as Dr. Fadl, a surgeon who was once imprisoned with al-Zawahiri in Cairo, and still languishes in an Egyptian jail cell. He is believed to have provided al Qaeda with an interpretation of the Koran that it used to justify its actions and recruit followers. In 2007 he challenged al Qaeda's basic ethos and condemned the 9-11 attacks. Like Benotman, he made it clear he believed 9-11 was counterproductive. The cumulative effect of the positions adopted by Benotman and Dr. Fadl has been a heightened awareness in the Islamic world of the death and destruction brought to Arab and Muslim lands by al Qaeda's obsession with killing innocent people in the West and murdering Shiite Muslims.

It could be argued that this debate would not have taken place in the wake of 9-11, or after the invasion of Iraq, had it not been for al Qaeda's killing of innocents in Iraq and in Afghanistan. Aside from Benotman and Dr. Fadl, the powerful Saudi cleric and theologian, Salman al-Oadah, who was once bin Laden's spiritual mentor, entered the fray in late 2007. He, too, condemned bin Laden for killing innocent men, women and children. He stated that the U.S. occupation of Iraq, the invasion of Afghanistan and the expanded Western military presence in Arab and Muslim lands, was the fault of al Qaeda.

The prediction by security experts that these verbal assaults will weaken al Qaeda, leading to a loss of support and then imploding, may be wishful thinking. This prediction is predicated on what may prove to be a misconception, namely that Arab youth are sufficiently educated to understand the nuances of the ongoing debate, or that Arabs generally will stop funding extreme versions of Islam that contribute directly to the growth of al Qaeda. Secondly, if al Qaeda imploded, it could morph into several smaller bodies that might be difficult to find and eliminate. There is also little to suggest that the Pakistani government and military have the will to move into the tribal lands bordering Afghanistan to wipe out al Qaeda's leadership and its bases.

Nevertheless, the debate taking place within the Arab and Muslim world is important because it is forcing people within Islam to look closely at what is in their midst. Over time, it could have a cumulative impact on al Qaeda, ultimately limiting its flow of recruits. ★

WARNING!!! The purest filtered/distilled water may be more dangerous than cigarettes because labs know how to test for disease markers in blood, but not in water (it's proprietary)! This is serious!!!

How many people have died because they don't know this? Your blood is 94% water and billions of people flush their diseases along with medication into the ground water 4-5 times/day and it ends up at a faucet somewhere. If you have well water and people in the area have cancer, you have a good chance of getting cancer! S.D. woman: "All around me they have MS, but they all drink pure water from ordinary distillers, filters, ozonators, reverse osmosis and alkaline water machines. The water is pure, why do they have MS?" People in the area with MS flush their diseases into the ground water and you pump the water up to your faucet, proving that the products don't work! Bottled water is like Russian Roulette. You don't know where that water has been! That's why our home electron machines recycle water 100's of times per gallon...NOT JUST ONCE, with amazing results because this patented method breaks down the hydrogen bonds in water. Dr. Guy Abraham, M.D. (UCLA): "Your hydrogen bond angle is 10° greater than ordinary water (114°)! Now we can measure the ability of blood to reach the extremities. Nothing comes close to your water!"

Listen to a toll free recording at 1-800-433-9553

Diabetic: "Why do people that sell pure water products hide this from the public when doctors* can also measure the ability of blood (94% water) to get to the extremities?"

A week after I received your machine I was scheduled for surgery! If I had listened to them I would have lost my foot!"

We know we have saved thousands of people because of the phone calls and letters we receive! How about the AIDS dentist on CBS 60 Minutes? They all use pure water along with 4,000 dentists surveyed and yet their purest water can't even kill pathogenic bacteria! Ours does! Also, the disease markers in water depress the immune system making you more susceptible to disease!

Here's what we did to prove that we have the only water in the world that can kill pathogenic bacteria: A town in Colorado that was fined $10,000/day because water treatment companies couldn't stop the horrible smell from a 5 acre waste lagoon with over 10 million gallons of sewer waste. We sprayed our energized water on the surface of the lagoon. The smell was gone in 24 hours! How about the thousands of wells with the same results? No other water can do that!

Look at our website (www.johnellis.com) and you will see signed letters from the town and a sports drink manufacturer showing the purest water can't kill pathogenic bacteria, spreading disease into your blood stream! Also, you will see a typical chart of an inoperable cancer patient and we have a man that works for us that is one of 8 people in a multi-billion dollar cancer study! As a result, pure water companies either admit they can't compete or warn each other to "beware" of our discovery! Apparently, they don't care if diabetics lose their legs, including a host of other problems. Although Dr. Abraham says, "The results speak for themselves!" they quote what textbooks say because they won't know how to test our water properties!

97% of all men will have prostate problems! Now, you have been warned about cigarettes and pure water products. Although we sell thousands of machines, those that don't listen may become victims of their own folly! Since we are engineers, not doctors, visit our website (www.johnellis.com) and read the signed letters. You will know why government officials, including Senators, are regular visitors to our 418 acre estate and Research Center celebrating this patented discovery! It may save your life!

DRILL NOW

THEY ARE YEARS LATE—it should already be converted to low-priced gasoline at your local filling station—but lawmakers are finally seriously discussing drilling for oil. For years, tree-huggers led by Sen. Joseph Lieberman (I-Conn.) and others have opposed drilling for oil on an “iceberg” in Alaska, along both coasts and in the Gulf of Mexico, arguing that it would hurt the “environment.” It takes about seven years after striking oil for it to show up as gas at the pumps. Still, economists say that undertaking the drilling could cause gas prices to immediately decline.

Actually, nobody holds picnics in the area known as ANWR and offshore rigs would be invisible to people on the beaches. Partly in response to Bilderberg orders (AFP June 23, 2008) to put a lid on the rising costs of oil, congressmen and President Bush are finally calling for drilling. Bush announced June 18 that he now supports drilling on the outer continental shelf and in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge, or ANWR.

“Congress must face a hard reality,” Bush said. “Unless members are willing to accept gas prices at today’s painful levels or even higher, our nation must produce more oil. If congressional leaders leave before the Fourth of July recess without taking action, they will need to explain why $4-a-gallon is not enough incentive for them to act.”

Polls show Americans are increasingly eager to expand drilling, said Robbie Diamond, president of Securing America’s Future Energy.

“We’ve had decades where people were unwilling, and politicians were unwilling, to seriously look at the resources in our own back yard and off our coast,” Diamond said. “Suddenly, it seems we are at a tipping point where many politicians are willing to make serious proposals about doing just that. There’s only so long that people can blame outside parties such as OPEC, Big Oil or speculators for our problems, when fundamentally our problem is supply and demand.”

He said Democrats, who took control of Congress last year, have passed legislation increasing fuel-efficiency standards and mandating more renewable-energy use, so increased production is the only lever left to pull for midterm relief.

There are two roadblocks to expanded offshore drilling: an annual congressional prohibition and an executive order imposed by Bush’s father, President George H.W. Bush, in 1990. But President Bush refuses to act first, saying he will lift Daddy’s executive Blame ‘the speculators’?

IT HAS BECOME FASHIONABLE TO BLAME “Big Oil” for rising gas prices. That’s OK because some of them take too much out of your wallet. But to ramble on about “speculators” raises the question: Who are they? Many “speculators” are mutual funds, pension funds and insurance funds. That includes about all of us. It doesn’t take a rocket scientist to understand supply-and-demand. The more oil produced, the lesser the demand and lesser the price at the pump. Keep drilling. ★ order only after Congress removes its ban. Bush’s silliness was assailed by Thomas Pyle, head of the Institute for Energy Research and former Republican congressional aide.

“The president has chosen to speak softly when American consumers need him to wield a big stick,” Pyle said. “He has the authority tear up the executive moratorium immediately, and we believe he should. Eliminating this senseless ban would show the world that the United States is finally getting serious about producing more of its own energy instead of just talking about it. This was a missed opportunity.”

Sen. John McCain (R-Ariz.), the presumptive Republican presidential nominee, announced June 16 that he has changed his position and now favors drilling on the outer continental shelf. He was following Bilderberg orders. ★

Drug smuggling tunnel in the U.S. Southwest.

TUNNEL VISION: U.S. trains Egypt in border control?

REP. TED POE (R-TEX.) wants to know why the Army stationed in his home state is training Egyptian soldiers to locate and destroy underground tunnels to help protect its borders, while at the same time the U.S.-Mexican border remains porous for underground smuggling.

Since Sept. 11, 2001, more than 40 smuggling tunnels from Mexico into the U.S. have been discovered. Why is the Army not protecting our borders but training Egyptians to protect theirs? ★

GIs Still Being Used as Guinea Pigs

CONGRESSIONAL LEADERS of both parties are calling for an investigation into the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) failure to inform in a timely manner veterans participating in medical tests that a drug they were taking has side effects that has in the past led to psychosis and suicide.

Following an investigation by The Washington Times, Sen. Barack Obama (D-Ill.), presumptive presidential nominee and a member of the Veterans Affairs Committee, said the VA’s actions in sponsoring the drug were “outrageous” and “unacceptable.” “Our veterans, particularly those suffering from mental health injuries, should have the very best health care and support in the world, they should never be needlessly exposed to drugs without proper notification of the dangers involved or effective monitoring of side effects,” he said.

Rep. Steve Buyer (R-Ind.), ranking minority member of the House Veterans Affairs Committee, sent a letter to the VA inspector general and the VA’s chief research and development officer requesting an investigation.

“I am troubled by allegations that these safeguards may not have been in place for this study and I am requesting an immediate investigation into this matter and I asked that VA report back to me as soon as possible,” Buyer wrote.

A spokesman for House Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-Calif.) said Congress will also investigate.

“This report raises many disturbing questions about the treatment of our veterans and the House Veterans Affairs Committee will get to the bottom of this,” said her spokesman, Nadeam Elshami. “We expect full and immediate cooperation from the VA.”

The VA took three months to notify its patients about severe mental side effects of the anti-smoking drug Chantix, after the Food and Drug Administration issued an alert about side effects that could lead to psychosis and suicide.

The VA said notification letters were tied up in the bureaucracy and the three-month time frame was not unrealistic.

“This is the most pathetic excuse that can be dredged up—it’s insulting,” said retired Marine Lt. Col. Roger Charles, editor of Defense Watch. “And then to brag that you got it done in three months because of a cumbersome bureaucracy? What if people’s lives are at risk? Oh wait, they are.” ★

Freedom of Speech Lands Cartoonist on Wrong Side of Feds

By Mike Finch

American citizen Carl Malaskiewicz-Blaise was detained for a year by Canadian Immigration authorities, and was jailed in the U.S. for five years, because a Secret Service psychiatrist labeled him delusional.

His offense? Making political cartoons. In Florida, Blaise was jailed in 1999 regarding non-violent domestic issues. In jail, he made cartoons negatively depicting President Bush, including one that said, "The president must die." Threatening the president is a federal offense, but arguably not in this instance as many insist the cartoon was satirical, and did not show actual intent.

On the day of his release, Secret Service agents arrested Blaise for "threatening the president" and brought in a bought-and-paid-for psychiatrist, Dr. Robert Phillips, to label Blaise as "delusional." Blaise said they made up a story about him being connected to a murder, and coerced him to take a plea deal for crimes he did not commit.

"My political views were called delusions when they were simply opinions," Blaise told AFP.

Some elements of Blaise's "delusions" were: the government had something to do with 9-11; Bush and the neo-cons are attempting to bring about a New World Order; Bush is creating a "surveillance state"; and these factors are leading to Armageddon.

If Blaise was locked up and diagnosed as "delusional" for such beliefs, what might happen to others?

Blaise, wanting no more of the U.S. government's scheming, traveled to Canada where he sought asylum. Canada promptly put Blaise in an Immigration Detention Center.

"Most of the people who are in there are only there for three or four weeks, and yet Blaise has been held for over a year," advocate Kenneth Fernandez said. "He is unquestionably a political prisoner. This is a classic instance of empire [making] an example of someone."

Recently a Canadian psychologist reported Blaise sane and not a flight risk to the court.

"His non-verbal communication and the content of his speech were entirely consistent with the hypothesis that he has been misdiagnosed as a psychotic, or that he is in complete remission and has faced considerable injustice in his homeland," Dr. David Woodbury said in a report released by Blaise. "Variations on this type of fundamentalist Christian millennial belief system are ubiquitous in the U.S. and held by many members of the Bush regime itself and thus, in the cultural context, do not constitute a delusion."

Even with this testimony the court kept Blaise a while longer. Blaise does not have the option of bail.

"It's indefinite," Blaise said. "I was conned and used . . . they used fraud and deception. I don't believe that all of this stuff is an accident."

In spite of all the difficulty, Blaise is hopeful that he will be released soon. ★

Shocking Truth: POWs Still Held in Laos

By Christopher J. Petherick

There is new evidence that American GIs are being held against their will in Southeast Asia more than three decades after the Vietnam War officially ended. A letter recently received by the father of a U.S. pilot, who went missing in action in 1971, could provide a key piece of information that proves American prisoners of war are alive and imprisoned in remote areas of South Vietnam.

Over the years, historians, researchers and independent journalists have made a compelling case that, during the Cold War, thousands of U.S. POWs were moved among Soviet, Chinese and North Korean labor camps, where they toiled and died under the worst conditions. Families of POWs and MIAs say the U.S. government has turned a blind eye to the plight of these men, even going so far as to sabotage their efforts at finding out what exactly happened to their loved ones.*

But Joe Milliner's incredible story of his son, told at the June 20 meeting of the National Alliance of POW/MIA Families in Crystal City, Va., could change all of that. Documentation compiled by Milliner could finally force the country to come to terms with the fact that thousands of Americans were abandoned by the U.S.

There is confusion over what happened to Milliner's son, U.S. Army Warrant Officer William P. Milliner, when the helicopter he was co-piloting disappeared on March 6, 1971. What is known is that William, who was 20 years old at the time, was the co-pilot on an AH1G Cobra helicopter gunship. He was returning from a combat support mission over Laos when he disappeared in cloudy weather.

The military reportedly dispatched a search-and-rescue team to locate William and the pilot of the helicopter, John F. Hummel. Tragically, the two were never located, and the Army eventually gave up looking for them.

Over the years, the Milliner family has never given up hope that their son would be found. As with many families of missing soldiers, the U.S. military has been unhelpful, some would even say willfully obstructing honest inquiries into what happened to lost loved ones.

However, recent events have renewed the Milliner's faith that William is alive and is being held in Southeast Asia against his will, possibly as a slave laborer.

The first occasion came as a result of a classified document, which was given to Milliner by a source inside the Pentagon who is sympathetic to MIA-POW families.

The official document was dated Oct. 4, 1989, and reports of a Thai businessman who said U.S. citizens, including a "William P. Milliner," are being held in a dangerous "no-man's land" controlled by thugs and warlords in a mountainous region in Laos.

A Thai businessman said he could secure William's release if the U.S. government were willing to pay a ransom. According to Milliner, U.S. officials shot down any discussion of a reward, effectively killing off any hopes of freeing the American.

Were it not for his friend at the Pentagon, Milliner said the classified account of the exchange between U.S. officials in Thailand and the unnamed businessman was slat-

Mystery Letter Says POWs Still Held as Slave Laborers

The following is a portion of the letter that was received by Joe Milliner, the father of William Milliner who went missing in action in 1971 in Vietnam. In the past six months, Milliner has been able to make contact with the author's assistant. He has confirmed that the physician is not Cambodian and used a pseudonym when signing the letter. The letter has been edited for space and clarity.

I worked for the government in Cambodia and Laos as a physician. . . .

Over three weeks ago, in September [2007], I was blindfolded and driven for what seemed like forever with a government official who kept telling me not to look at anyone for too long. . . .

I went to a village hut where the official met with four young people. In walked a man who was bleeding from his left arm. He had no left arm as if it were cut in a perfect angle. I did what I could, but I didn't have much equipment or my assistant like I usually do. . . . [He was] really skinny and had a beard a mile long. He did have some hair on his head but not much. His blood pressure was good and everything else was fine. I could see some muscle definition like he was a working man.

[Before I left] he grabbed me by my shirt and asked if I was an American. I said, "yes." [I asked him,] "are you Australian?" He said, "No. I'm from Kentucky." He said, "Please call my mother. Please call my father. Please call my commander." I said, why don't you do it yourself, and he said those men wouldn't let him go. "I've been here so long and in Russia working on the bridges underground," he said.

I asked him if there are there others. He said most are in the caves at Sam Neua [a remote area on the Laos-Vietnam border] and underground in Ho Chi Minh under the earth. He said his friend Tom Hert or Hart had escaped to Cambodia and Van Fleet from the Korean War are with him. He said that British and Thailand men, and Donny Wood and Hrlka or Hrdlika, or something to that effect, had escaped.

I asked him his name. He said it is Richard Millino, or Milliner. He spoke Vietnamese with English mixed in, but his Vietnamese [was] very good.

The official yelled: "Come on. Are you almost done?" I said, hold on. Then [the man] said, "just kill me, I can't take this." I said, "No, I will call the government." [. . .] He cried and said "my daddy [is] a soldier. Tell him! Oh god." He yelled really loud and grabbed my arm with a grip like I have never felt.

Then his young captors stormed in and [. . .] grabbed him, chained him up and dragged him away screaming as the official was telling me, "go back to the car." He somehow punched one of his captors and ran with his chains, before they grabbed him and threw him onto [a] truck. . . . I heard him yell, "tell my parents I love them. Please tell them I will stay alive."

Later, I went to [the] embassy in Laos and told the investigator there—an older guy, tall almost bald. He said, "Oh no, that was a mentally insane Canadian soldier, who chose to stay here after war."

I said, "He said you are the one who is crazy."

Sincerely, R. Ortiz Jr. [pseudonym]

ed to be archived for 50 years and would not be released—even to family members—until 2039.

Since that time, Milliner says that there have been sporadic sightings of his son, including another U.S. document that claims warlords were seeking only $1,800 for the release of his son.

But the most compelling piece of evidence arrived just last year in the form of a letter from a doctor who had been working in Cambodia. According to Milliner, the physician's account proves to him that his son is still alive somewhere in the jungle.

In September 2007, Milliner says, he received an unsigned letter from someone claiming to be a physician working in Cambodia and Laos.

The doctor wrote that, in early September 2007, he had treated an American man with certain tell-tale wounds. The doctor said that the patient was suffering from a poor amputation of his arm. He also described certain scars that matched other sightings of William that the Milliners have collected over the years.

The doctor said he was unnerved by the extent of secrecy surrounding this patient. He had been driven through the jungle for what he described as a long time, and he was allowed to bring just a few medical instruments and medicine—but no assistants.

The doctor wrote that the guards kept a close watch over this patient. However, in a free moment, the man said in perfect English, punctuated by some Vietnamese, that he is an American being held against his will.

Milliner received that letter in September of last year. Since then, Milliner says he believes the doctor now fears for his life and has gone into hiding. Over the years, he says, presumptive Republican presidential candidate Sen. John McCain (R-Ariz.) and Sen. John Kerry (D-Mass.) have both undermined efforts to help Americans who are still being held against their will. McCain and Kerry have both weighed in against offering reward money for the release of U.S. citizens who may still be in captivity in Laos, Vietnam, China and North Korea, said Milliner. ★

JFK Assassination Link Found To Recent Financial Swindle

By Michael Collins Piper

Although the media reported on the bizarre case of Samuel Israel III—an East Coast hedge fund operator who swindled investors out of $450 million and who disappeared after attempting to fake his own suicide—what the media has not reported is the connection of Israel's family to circumstances surrounding the assassination of John F. Kennedy.

The media has mentioned Israel is a scion of a distinguished New Orleans Jewish family. Not mentioned is that Israel's family enterprise, the Leon Israel Company, popped up in a mysterious way in connection to activities of JFK's alleged assassin, New Orleans native Lee Harvey Oswald, in that city in the summer of 1963. While details of Oswald's New Orleans sojourn are thoroughly documented, his link to the Israel Company seems taboo.

Here's the story: When Oswald applied for a room in New Orleans he told what CIA-connected writer Priscilla McMillan described as "another of his funny, pointless lies," that is, that Oswald said he worked for the Leon Israel Company. McMillan insisted Oswald had no connection with the company. We do know the company was in the coffee import business. We don't know why Oswald claimed he worked there. And maybe he did.

What is puzzling is that JFK assassination researchers avoid exploring the Israel Company. Although researchers dissect other picayune details about Oswald's life in New Orleans, no researchers will mention the Israel connection.

The principal figure behind the company, Samuel Israel Jr.—evidently grandfather of the current Samuel Israel—was closely connected to Clay Shaw, the New Orleans businessman unsuccessfully prosecuted in 1969 by New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison for complicity in the JFK assassination. Israel was vice president of the Board of Commissioners of the Port of New Orleans and on the Council of the Lower Mississippi River Port Interests (putting him in trade executive Clay Shaw's sphere).

Israel also won the French Medal of Merit for his service in the U.S. Army in Europe, at the time Shaw was decorated by the French for his service there. It is likely Shaw and Israel knew each other as early as World War II.

Was Oswald promised a job at the Israel Company—arranged by Shaw—or was Oswald employed by the company? If so, how? Did this company play a role in manipulating Oswald in New Orleans? These are questions that need to be answered.

At present day, Samuel Israel III is on the lam, many believe in Israel which welcomes Jewish criminals fleeing prosecution in the United States. Note, though: Israel says he is a Christian, despite his background.

ISRAEL III

OSWALD

GARRISON

The possible Israeli connection to the Samuel Israel, III money scandal is interesting considering that—according to Jewish-American JFK researcher A. J. Weberman—Jim Garrison, in an unpublished novel, suggested Israel's intelligence service, the Mossad, was behind the JFK assassination—something Garrison did not mention elsewhere.

Garrison evidently became aware Clay Shaw had Mossad connections through service on the board of the shadowy Permindex corporation.

In light of revelations in the 1980s (theretofore unknown) that JFK was working to stop Israel's secret drive to assemble an arsenal of nuclear weapons, Shaw's Permindex engagement is intriguing. In fact, Permindex chairman, Louis Bloomfield was a functionary of liquor baron and Meyer Lansky crime syndicate figure Sam Bronfman, president of the World Jewish Congress and—with Bronfman—a major patron of Israel's nuclear weapons program, among a group of U.S. and Canadian millionaires who bankrolled the project in the '50s to the tune of $250 million today.

Another Permindex figure was banker Tibor Rosenbaum, longtime Mossad director for finance and arms procurement, whose Geneva bank was a Mossad proprietary and money laundry for Lansky crime syndicate profits. ★

Kosher Plant Hired Aliens, Manufactured Illegal Drugs

By Pat Shannan

Federal agents arrested 390 workers at the Agriprocessors plant in Postville, Iowa in what U.S. officials called the largest raid of its kind in U.S. history.

In laying the legal groundwork for a massive raid of the country's largest kosher slaughterhouse, federal authorities cited claims that illegal narcotics production took place at the factory and hundreds of illegal immigrants were employed there, including several of the rabbis responsible for kosher supervision.

With Agriprocessors producing more than half of the nation's kosher meat, the raid has prompted fears of a disruption in supply. Though the plant is back in operation, it was unclear if Agriprocessors could meet its normal production capacity with hundreds of its workers in federal custody.

Founded by Brooklyn butcher Aaron Rubashkin, Agriprocessors produces kosher meat and poultry marketed under the labels Aaron's Best and Rubashkin's. When the news broke, members of the Jewish Conservative movement's Hekhshe Tzedek Commission condemned the company, saying that keeping kosher requires more than just adherence to ritual matters, but also sensitivity to the environment and respect for workers and animals. The Hekhshe Tzedek initiative is in part a response to past allegations of misconduct at Agriprocessors. In one alleged instance, a Hasidic Jew duct-taped a worker's eyes and then hit him with a meat hook.

Agriprocessors has come under fire before for its labor practices, as well as health and safety violations. In March, authorities fined the company $182,000 for violations at the plant. People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA) has clandestinely videotaped a controversial kosher slaughter practice used at the plant.

The raid, which required federal authorities to rent an expansive fairground in nearby Waterloo to house detainees, prompted the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Iowa to temporarily relocate judges and court personnel to the site because the facilities in Cedar Rapids and Sioux City were inadequate.

"There have been other operations where more people have been arrested," Tim Counts, an Immigration and Customs Enforcement spokesman, told JTA. "But as far as we can determine, this is the largest single-site operation as far as number of arrests goes."

The raid follows a six-month investigation involving more than a dozen federal agencies, including the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Drug Enforcement Agency, the Internal Revenue Service, and the departments of Labor and Agriculture.

Three Israelis and four Ukrainians were among the detainees held on charges of being in the country illegally, Counts said. Most of those taken prisoner are from Guatemala and Mexico.

Agriprocessors said in a statement Tuesday that it "takes the immigration laws seriously" and intended to "continue to cooperate with the government in its investigation."

In the affidavit filed as part of the 60-page application for a search warrant, additional details were revealed of the government's investigation of Agriprocessors.

The affidavit says that 697 plant employees are believed to have violated federal laws.

According to the document, a former supervisor at the plant—identified only as Source #1—told investigators that some 80 percent of the workforce was illegal.

Source #1 also claimed to have discovered active production of the drug methamphetamine at the plant and reported incidents of weapons being carried there. Methamphetamine, more commonly known as "crystal meth," is illegal. The sale of this drug in the cities of the United States has ruined tens of thousands of lives.

Much of the information the government collected appears to have come from former employees of Agriprocessors who were detained by police on unrelated charges. Sources related similar stories of presenting fraudulent documents and Social Security numbers when seeking employment with the company. ★

Burning of Christian Books Ignored by Media

By Mark Glenn

Upon hearing that Christian missionaries had been in the area passing out copies of the New Testament (that he referred to as “propaganda”) deputy Mayor Uzi Aharon of Or Yehuda went up and down the streets of the town, barking out orders that the “offensive material” should be brought forth by the town’s inhabitants. Working in tandem with the deputy mayor were Jewish religious students who went door to door collecting the religious writings. Once collected, the books were dumped into a pile, doused with gasoline and set ablaze in a parking lot near a synagogue.

The initial news stories concerning this raw display of anti-Christian bigotry originally featured an unrepentant deputy mayor saying it was a “commandment” for Jews to burn such materials, adding that he did not denounce the burning of the books, but rather those who dared distribute such material within the Jewish state. Later however as the story began to grow legs in foreign media outlets, the formerly bold and brash deputy mayor was backpedaling, saying he “respects” the New Testament and would “never do what had been done to the Jews in the past,” evidently referring to the burning of Jewish books during the World War II era.

Predictably, the Jewish press in America censored the event. Not a peep was heard from any of the heavy hitters, meaning Pastor John Hagee, Rod Parsley or Pat Robertson. Calls and emails by American Free Press newspaper to their offices asking for their opinions on this outrage were not returned.

What is most interesting in this latest incident is the fact that it serves as prime facie evidence vindicating what critics of Judaism have alleged for years, that the Talmud—in addition to depicting Jesus as a sorcerer and His mother as a prostitute—commands the burning of Christian books.

As of this moment the government of Israel is doing nothing, saying it is a “local matter,” despite the fact that there are laws forbidding the destruction or desecration of any religious item any particular group holds sacred. In addition, no formal apologies have been offered to the world’s Christians by Israel or any of her spokespersons as would have been demanded by the Zionist state had a similar event transpired where Jewish books were burned in a Christian or Muslim country.

Anti-Christian bigotry in Israel is by no means something new. From its embryonic days, Christianity and its followers were considered public enemies.

When the Jewish state was resurrected from its 2,000-year-old grave during the 20th century and Zionist/Marxist Jews went on the rampage in Palestinian villages, Christians and their churches were firebombed and treated with the same kind of visceral hatred as took place in Russia after the Bolsheviks took over.

When the Christian patriarch complained about Jewish abuse of the Christians of Palestine in the name of then-Pope Paul VI, Israel (through one of her intermediaries) responded with “Your Pope is a foolish man. If the Pope has an army, let him send it.”

Recently a Christian teenager in Israel was almost killed when a package exploded. It was sent to his home by Jewish extremists associated with the terrorist groups “Kach” and the Jewish Defense League exploded. In 2007 Jewish terrorists set a Christian church on fire in Jerusalem. In March 2006, a Jewish couple—pretending to be Christian pilgrims—entered the Church of the Annunciation in Nazareth, pushing a baby carriage filled with explosives with the obvious intention of killing scores of Christians. They were attacked and subdued by the church-goers before they could carry out their plans. Although hundreds of similar events have been chronicled, little or no attention is paid to it by the controlled press in America.

The Anti-Defamation League of B’nai B’rith (whose activities include spying on Americans and aiding and abetting those stealing U.S. defense secrets) reluctantly issued a statement condemning the book burning incident for fear of having its organically anti-Christian agenda exposed.

Despite the fact that it publicly called for “respect for the sacred texts of all faiths,” the ADL has been the most active organization in the world in seeing laws antithetical to Christianity passed in various countries, in addition to referring to the New Testament as “classical anti-Semitism” and the cause of all Jewish persecution these last 2,000 years.

This latest incident involving the burning of several hundred copies of the New Testament, while being a shock to some, should not be to those paying attention, as brave voices have warned of this situation for some time. ★

Criticism of Israel Called ‘Unintentional Anti-Semitism’

By Rev. Ted Pike

Are you an unintentional anti-Semite? The U.S. State Department’s “Office of Global Anti-Semitism” in its 2008 report to Congress warns not just of conscious, intentional anti-Semitism but of another lurking form of potential bigotry: unintentional anti-Semitism.

This consists of criticisms of Israel, which, though true, might be manipulated by others to Israel’s detriment. To avoid assisting Israel’s enemies, the State Department recommends that every comment about Israel (including its leaders and military) first be scrutinized for whether it could put Israel in a bad light. If so, it shouldn’t be said. Only then can we consider ourselves “free from anti-Semitism.”

What if you defy the government and go ahead and speak truthful criticisms of Israel, knowing that Israel’s detractors will probably use it against her? According to the Office of Global Anti-Semitism, one who assists anti-Semites is an anti-Semite.

However, people who don’t face reality hold back part of the truth. They consider too much truth to be potentially dangerous. Christian Evangelical leaders believe they protect Jews from possible persecution by censoring truth about Jewish supremacism and creation of Christian-persecuting hate laws. In reality, protection of Jewish anti-Christian activists empowers them to flourish and expand their corruption of society.

This, in turn, only increases criticism and resentment of all Jews—most of whom are innocent of such evil. Many bitterly resent the Anti-Defamation League, architect of hate laws, for the bad reputation it gives the Jewish people.

Evangelicals think that by only speaking well of Jews they are beyond the reproach of ever being labeled anti-Semitic. Wrong. The State Department says that if Christians believe the New Testament account that Jewish leaders had Christ crucified they are the very worst kind of anti-Semites: “classical” anti-Semites. That’s what Hitler was.

To please both Jews and the government, evangelicals must now fulfill two criteria: Never say true but unflattering things about Israel and abandon belief in the New Testament.

Will evangelicals accommodate the State Department’s new requirement of philo-Semitic correctness? Countless followers of John Hagee already do. They agree with his book, In Defense of Israel, that the New Testament testimony that Jews killed Christ is an anti-Semitic lie that birthed the holocaust.

Yet, an increasing number of Americans are no longer content to be insulated from truth. Many visiting the Internet and www.truthtellers.org in particular are rediscovering an enormous reality: We don’t have to fear the whole truth. Truth can be trusted entirely. Truth doesn’t beget error and evil; rather, it bears the good fruit of knowledge, wisdom, moderation, and guidance in a darkened, confused world. ★

Historian Refuses to Recant 'Heresies'

Open Letter from Vincent Reynouard

On June 19, 2008, the Brussels criminal court found Siegfried Verbeke and me guilty of “disputing crimes against humanity,” sentencing us to a year’s imprisonment and ordering us to pay 25,000 euros ($40,000). It ordered the immediate arrest of Siegfried Verbeke and perhaps of myself as well (a friend of ours who attended the hearing says no, but the press reports state the opposite and we haven’t been able to get an answer from the clerk’s office).

Unsurprisingly, the court had rejected all our arguments, notably the one invoking article 150 of the Belgian Constitution to request a trial . . . before a jury.

It’s plain to see that in the last three years anti-revisionist oppression has greatly increased. The times when revisionist received sentences are over. Today, apart from the huge fines, actual imprisonment is always decided. I think especially of Sylvia Stolz, Ernst Zündel and Germar Rudolf, heroic people now languishing in German jails.

I think also of Georges Theil in France, of Gaston-

Armand Amaudruz, René-Louis Berclaz and Jürgen Graf of Switzerland.

Historical revisionism belongs to no one. Its findings are the fruit of traditional methods of inquiry where scientific expertise assists in the appraisal of testimonies and in research. They will be obvious to any honest individual, whether on the political left or right, believer or atheist.

VINCENT REYNOUARD

But it goes without saying that its implications extend well beyond the historical scope of its outset. The stakes involved, gigantic ones, are political and even theological. If some refuse to see this—because of blindness, cowardice or mistaken strategy—our adversaries, in their end, have understood quite well. They know that a sudden bursting through of the historical truth about the period 1914-1946 would call into question the world order founded at Nuremberg in 1945-1946.

This is why, in the face of people whom they constantly present as a small sect of cranks denying the obvious, they have special laws passed in Europe and resolutions adopted at the UN. The flagrant discrepancy between their contemptuous talk, on the one hand, and their actions, on the other hand, gives them the lie. To paraphrase the French wartime orator Philippe Henriot, I’ll say: “When a man can think of no other way but imprisonment to rid himself of a verbal opponent, it’s because he has no arguments. When a man is reduced to making up stupid lies, it’s because the truth is against him.”

The way ahead, therefore, is all laid out for us: we must continue to repeat the truth, the whole truth, including the truth about what’s at stake in this struggle. Far from being merely a sterile quarrel between devotees of the past cut off from present-day realities, the fight for historical truth is, on the contrary, the continuation, on the intellectual level, of the war whose armed phase ended in 1945 with the defeat of the Axis forces. And it’s clear that this conflict, having begun not on September 3, 1939 but on January 30, 1933, is the modern form of the eternal struggle. . . .

This is the reason why, even after the Third Reich was completely crushed militarily, the war continued, and has continued up to today. Our opponents in this never-ending fight have a weapon of mass destruction: the alleged “holocaust.” Since 1945, this lie has prevented any dispassionate debate on National Socialism and, more generally, on societies that respect natural order. “We know where that led” is how people constantly respond to those who dare speak of order, the common good, wholesomeness, moral standards, safeguarding heritage, the birth rate, rights of kinship etc.

Against all the cowards with their claims of prudence, concern with efficiency, realism and whatever else; against all the pretentious twits whose lives are nothing but a series of intervals between assorted betrayals, we should repeat Christ’s own teaching: “Let your yes be yes, and your no be no, for all else comes of evil.” No, the German homicidal gas chambers never existed. Yes, “the holocaust” is a myth.

Some will condemn my actions for the fact that I have seven children. They are wrong. If I act as I do, it’s first of all for my children, to ensure a better future for them. However, our civilization will not be saved by any sparing of efforts in the most vital struggles, which are (as is only logical) also the most dangerous, for when engaged they threaten the very worst for the opponent, and so provoke his most violent reactions. But, as Chesnelong said: “When evil is the most daring, good must be the most courageous.” ★

Vincent Reynouard is a French revisionist who has written widely on the subject of the world wars of the 20th century. Texas Group Testifies: Honest Elections in U.S. a Myth

By Mark Anderson

Not giving up on the goal of securing honest elections, two Texas groups brought national experts to Austin, Tex. June 25 to give a presentation on electronic vote fraud to the state House Committee on Elections.

VoteRescue, and Texans for Real Elections, presented documented testimony during an interim hearing “to debunk the myth of electronic voting security,” according to a press advisory from organizer Vickie Karp, author of the noted book, Hacked.

The experts who addressed the committee were Bruce

Funk, Clint Curtis, Jim March and Noel Runyan. Curtis actually designed “vote-flipping” software while employed in 2000 at Yang Enterprises but became a whistleblower; and March was a co-plaintiff in the 2004 California lawsuit against Diebold “for running uncertified software in their machines, which Diebold lost,” the advisory added. Funk and Runyan also have impressive credentials.

Ms. Karp and associates Abbe DeLozier and Karen Renick put this together to continue their quest to convert all Texas elections to hand-counted paper ballots, with no break in the custody chain and results posted at the precinct level. ★

Activist Determined to Get 9-11 Question on Ballot

THE 9-11 NEW YORK CITY BALLOT Initiative that AFP reported about is going through a disturbing phase, according to the Manhattan attorney who originated it. Carl Person told AFP that the initiative, as he understands it, is not nearly as advanced as it should be. He believes there is a failure by the program's current managers to gather enough valid petition signatures of city voters in time to place a proposal for re-investigating 9-11 on the 2008 city ballot.

Person says his original ballot effort was "undermined." Therefore, he is carrying on with his own new ballot plan, having parted ways with those running the "official" NYC Ballot Initiative that represents something he started but was not allowed to finish.

He alleges that the initiative's leader, Les Jamieson, was lured off course in the summer of 2007 by William Pepper, a longtime activist who appeared at a 9-11 conference in September 2007 at New York's Cooper Union, organized by Jamieson. Person spoke there, outlining his idea to gather petition signatures to place such a proposal before voters, but also to create a citywide attorney general (AG) who would implement and generate funds for the new 9-11 investigation upon voter approval. Person himself volunteered to become the city's first AG—the nation's first-ever local AG operating independently of state AGs and the national one.

Person was given only five minutes to speak at Cooper Union, thanks mainly to supporters who demanded that organizers let him talk. AFP was there. Person's proposal was evidently the only practical idea announced that went beyond analyzing the 9-11 tragedy and constituted a way of getting to the bottom of the events of 9-11-01, which was a criminal operation with military precision against the city of New York, not simply a "terrorist attack" against "the nation." Person looks at it from this bottom-up angle.

In other words, let New Yorkers use the power of their vote to legally reinvestigate a terrible crime against their city. It's as simple as that, said Person, who would finance the new city AG office through anti-trust lawsuits to make it self-supporting without a new tax.

Person has long wanted to pursue this avenue to reinvestigate 9-11, when almost 3,000 Americans were killed in an operation for which no crime scene was even created, apart from the almost total lack of evidence that the federal government's conspiracy theory on the 19 Muslim "hijacker-attackers" is true. The Cooper Union guests included noted architect Richard Gage, whose presentation, in the eyes of most attendees, demolished the government's tale of what happened. Gage did this by showing that the three World Trade Center buildings that were totally demolished were constructed in a manner that precludes destruction by commercial jet impacts, burning jet fuel and the "pancaking" of floors resulting from fire.

That is, powerful explosive charges set by criminals must surely have been involved, according to the evidence at hand. This is what needs to be painstakingly investigated, with testimony gathered and the guilty tried and punished, ballot backers say.

Virtually no one in the 9-11 truth movement puts any credence in the federal investigation that resulted in the official 9-11 Commission report, which does not even mention that the 47-story World Trade Center 7 building came down neatly into its own footprint in the manner of a controlled demolition, taking place in just 6.5 seconds without having been hit by a plane, more than five hours after the much-taller Twin Towers were destroyed.

Person alleges that Pepper told Jamieson that he could come up with money to back the ballot initiative, but that Person's local AG idea had to be dropped as a condition.

"I say it was undermined—and you question why they're doing that," Person told AFP.

Jamieson responded by saying that Pepper, in his view, was right in advising removal of the attorney general provision. "We came up with only 1,000 signatures . . . it failed miserably," Jamieson said, referring to the AG provision.

Jamieson also denied that Pepper was an interloper of sorts who scuttled Person's original effort. He called Pepper, who's still involved, a man of "prodigious wisdom and courage" whose input simplified the effort so it could move ahead.

But Person maintains that the state statute under which the ballot plan is being crafted requires a specified means of financing that the current ballot planners lack. Thus, he thinks the proposal could be stopped before it makes it on the ballot.

"Somebody could stop it in court because there is no financing," Person said. When the AG idea was cut, "they took the heart out of it—the financing," he added.

Jamieson told AFP that he has 10,000 valid signatures already gathered, which Person doubts. Jamieson added that if enough signatures are not gathered by Sept. 4, the provision for a new investigation will not make it on the city's November 2008 ballot. He claims to have 84 people gathering signatures but he wants many more. He said he needs at least 30,000 valid signatures by July's end, at the very latest, to turn in to the city council. The council could then vote to put the measure on the ballot. But if that does not happen, another 15,000 valid signatures would be needed to override the council and force the matter onto the ballot.

Time is short. Jamieson would like to have 1,000 people each working 15 hours over a week's time, gathering at least 100 signatures apiece.

Person says he still has 800 or so original signatures from his initial effort. He wants to continue with the AG idea included, while devising ways for petition-circulators to raise money as an incentive to gather enough signatures in a reasonable time frame. He may also seek seed money, while mindful that getting the ballot proposal ready for the November 2008 election is not realistic for either camp, in his opinion.

An eight-member commission would be created under the Jamieson-led plan, listed at nyc911initiative.org. ★

THE CONFERENCE THEY COULD NOT SHUT DOWN NOW ON DVD & AUDIO

In October of 2007 patriots and Nationalists from around the globe gathered in Irvine California to confront THE issue of our time: The abject subservience of this once great nation to Israel. Our sons and daughters continue to die and the neocons continue to wreak havoc, threatening never-ending war for the benefit of no other nation but Israel.

But the ADL and its lackeys wasted no time in attempting to shut this conference down. They pulled out all the stops, including getting the hotel to cancel on us at the last minute and turn attendees away at the door.

But we could not be stopped!

Irish Nationalists Crush NWO's Plans for Europe

By George Kadar

Most of the countries of the 27 European Union (EU) nations were happily proceeding with the ratification of the new EU constitution based on the successful historical recipe dictated by the U.S. in 1913 when the Internal Revenue Service and "Federal" Reserve were established: no publicity, no votes and the usual arm-twisting and manipulations in the background in order to ratify something that would surely cause a major debate in any country if brought out into the open.

Fortunately for nationalists worldwide, the lesson of 2005 was not learned by the local New World Order boys. In 2005, both in France and the Netherlands, voters rejected a European constitution. The new Treaty of Lisbon is almost fully identical to the prior documents, carried in the dark, without voting allowed in any of the 27 nations but Ireland.

A few main points from the Treaty of Lisbon:

- The creation of the office of a European president. This was opposed by the smaller countries of the continent and forced through by the bigger ones. The result will be a much stronger centralization of power and more domination by the larger nations. The new president will be elected for a 2.5 years, for a maximum of two terms. The present system is based on a six-month presidential term in rotation.
- A single position will be created for EU foreign affairs and security policy—a further shift toward centralization.
- The number of EU Commissioners will be reduced. By 2014 only two-thirds of the EU countries will be represented by commissioners. Again, the smaller nations will be left out.

Irish election officials prepare to count the ballots for the Lisbon Treaty referendum.

- Member states will be forced to hand over jurisdiction to the EU in many domestic and judiciary affairs.
- The right to veto some legislation by individual members will be revoked.
- Of 440 provisions of the treaty rejected in 2005, only two were changed.
- The European motto, "United in Diversity," remains the same.

All the minor changes in the proposed constitution were cosmetic. For example, the term "European foreign minister" was replaced with the Orwellian "High Representative of the Union for Foreign Affairs and Security Policy." Also, the term "European regulations" replaced "European laws."

EUROPEAN ECONOMIC WOES

The average EU citizen has a lot more to worry about than a EU constitution that will change his future world order; he is under great pressure right now.

The average household in the United Kingdom is spending around $2,000 (U.S.) a year for natural gas. This is expected to increase by 40 percent by the end of next winter. Fuel prices seem to be rising out of control, directly inflating food prices and transportation costs. (However, Bilderberg is trying to put a cap on rising oil prices.)

During the recent temporary fuel shortage in the UK, caused by Shell truck drivers going on strike, a gas station captured national headlines by raising fuel prices to $14 (U.S.) a gallon. The same drivers consider the $9 (U.S.) a gallon price a bargain.

Besides the record fuel prices, the UK is setting new records in abortions: 200,000 abortions in one year in the UK and Wales. Scotland is excluded. Scotland is trying to be excluded from more and more UK affairs. Its independence movement is strong and getting stronger every day. It seems 301 years of British rule were one year too many for that nation.

IRISH CITIZENS CAUSE CHAOS

The direct result of the Irish rejection is total and unmitigated chaos in the EU. Reactions of member state leaders are ranging from: "We need to learn from the Irish example" to "Ratify or get out." There is uncertainty and no easy solution on the horizon; it seems democracy in the EU reached its natural limitations.

Copies of the Lisbon agreement were handed out on the streets of Ireland before the vote. The results were "No"—53.4 percent and "Yes"—46.6 percent. Grassroots organizations and even some Irish political leaders were campaigning actively against the Lisbon treaty.

Would that more European nations followed the lead of Ireland and the Netherlands in rejecting the imposition of a New World Order on European soil. ★

Breakdown of Traditional European Family Disturbs Analysts

By Antonius J. Patrick

The European Parliament has received a new study from the Institute for Family Policy entitled, "The Evolution of the Family in Europe, 2008." It is another urgent warning that if societal trends are not turned around, and quickly, the traditional European family will become a thing of the past.

An indication of the cultural depravity is seen in what is now the leading cause of death: abortions. Some 1.2 million babies per year are aborted. Is it any wonder that Europeans have been unable to sustain their population?

Likewise, the institution of marriage, the foundation of a vibrant family life and in turn a healthy society, is in shambles. People are no longer marrying. In 2006, there were 732,752 fewer marriages than there were in 1980, a decline of about 23 percent.

Of those who choose to wed, more than half do not stay together. The divorce rate has skyrocketed—1 million in 2006, which is 365,000 more than in 1980. From 1996 to 2006, there were over 10.1 million marital breakdowns which affected some 15 million children.

"Dysfunctional families" are now the norm.

These trends have resulted in the shrinkage of the size of European households with an average of 2.4 members per home to one in four homes now being occupied by a single person.

The population growth in Europe which did take place between 2000 and 2007 is of little solace. Of the 14.2 million people who were added, 12 million (84 percent) were immigrants, most of them non-whites from former British colonies. The immigrant population now stands at 27 million or 5.5 percent of the total population. These figures do not take into account illegal immigration.

Although radical feminism, immigration, alternative lifestyles, materialism and contraception have all been cited by observers for the dissolution of the family, they are also symptoms of a fundamental crisis which has affected Western man for some time—that of secularism. And, at the heart of secularism is "selfishness," where individual satisfaction is tantamount, while the interests and rights of the family, community and country have become secondary.

Self sacrifice, a key ingredient in nearly every successful civilization is, in today's world, no longer seen as a virtue. Instead, sacrifice has been superseded by the glorification of the self.

Another feature of secularism is the denigration of the past, especially those individuals whose accomplishments were through selfless acts. A cursory look at the treatment that such figures receive from a typical college history text is testimony to this fact.

Raising a family is about sacrifice. This takes two parents who are willing to forgo their own self-interest for their children. Sacrifice within the family even extends to older children whose needs, at times, must be sublimated to their younger siblings. Such traits, however, are carried forth into the world for the benefit of all.

At one time the idea of sacrifice did not have to be spelled out, but was an inherent characteristic of an advanced society. Those days, tragically, are long gone.

Until Western man readopts the mindset of his forefathers, whose sacrifices created the greatest civilization ever known, the grim realities found in studies like "The Evolution of the Family in Europe, 2008" will continue to surface. ★

Sex & the U.S. Military:

Startling statistics show women at great risk from fellow soldiers

By Mike Finch

Thirty years ago the question might have been, "Should women be allowed in the military?" Now the question is, "Should women be allowed to go on combat missions?" The current trend in the military and government will lead to more women in combat roles, even though there is clear evidence that such action could create many problems for the military.

"Troop shortages, and the widespread reluctance to reinstate a draft, have created a pressure to open all military jobs to qualified women," reports the LA Times.

Defense analyst Lawrence J. Korb predicts that, "In the next two years, all the restrictions are going to be lifted." For instance, just recently Lt. Gen. Ann Dunwoody was nominated for four-star, full general status. This is the first time a woman has been considered for this level of service.

The next president will likely decide whether or not women should be trained for combat roles in the military.

John McCain is a fairly lonely voice of opposition to allowing women in combat roles. Though Hillary Clinton and Barack Obama have not yet weighed in on the subject, many feminist groups, Democrats and left-wingers want to allow women to be in combat units. They argue that women are already in combat, with 11 percent of the current forces in Iraq being female. Prof.

Kingsley Browne is one of the few vocal opponents to placing females in combat.

"The U.S. is placing increasing numbers of women in combat situations, a move that poses substantial threats to military effectiveness," Browne said in his book Co-Ed Combat. The 2007 book outlines several scientific and observational rationales for his position. One such rationale is the obvious reality of the sexual tension created by women and men working together in intimate circumstances.

Consensual sex has become a problem in the military. According to a 1997 RAND report, "Instructors were kept busy policing the sexes at a time when their main task was to teach military skills." Many such stories have come out of Iraq, where some co-ed barracks have been called "out-of-control frat parties."

The number of women in the U.S. military continues to increase (currently about 15 percent), though according to several reports nearly a third of the women were sexually assaulted or raped during their tour of duty, and most report sexual harassment.

"My jaw dropped when the doctors [at a veterans clinic] told me that 41 percent of female veterans seen at the clinic say they were victims of sexual assault while in the military, and 29 percent report being raped during their military service," Rep. Jane Harman (D-Calif.) said. "In 2006, 2,947 sexual assaults were reported. . . . 2,688 reports were made in 2007. . . . According to DOD statistics, only 181 out of 2,212 subjects investigated for sexual assault in 2007—including 1,259 reports of rape—were referred to courts-martial. . . . This is in stark contrast to the civilian trend of prosecuting sexual assault. In California, for example, 44 percent of reported rapes result in arrests, and 64 percent of those who are arrested are prosecuted."

This is a new problem for the military because women are in combat zones with men, often in co-ed barracks and tents. Historically this is a very recent trend (beginning in the 1970s), and it seems that the military is not prepared to deal with the sexual side effects and problems of such actions.

In World War I, 34,000 women served in the military, and 350,000 served in WWII. But most positions held by women were far from battle lines, and not integrated with the male soldiers. Currently, women "fly combat aircraft and act as drivers, interpreters, explosive-disposal specialists, military police and a variety of other roles," Brown said.

Many of the same feminist organizations that are rightly outraged at the sexual misconduct in the military, are also the same groups pushing for women to be allowed combat roles. If the military is having trouble policing bases and barracks, how will they police fox-holes, month-long ground missions or other real combat situations? And that does not even account for possible abuses of captured women by the enemy.

Though these groups want to allow women into these roles for the sake of "equality," they would prefer that women, unlike men, be able to voluntarily choose combat roles. If a draft came into effect, only the staunchest feminists would recommend the involuntary placement of women in combat roles. ★

AFP Videos Now On the Internet

By Julia Foster

If you are a weekly reader of the print edition of American Free Press—and if you are not familiar with the website americanfreepress.net on the Internet—you may not be aware that AFP is now making available short videos that are being broadcast and circulated internationally via email.

The videos feature commentary by AFP editors and correspondents such as Jim Tucker, Michael Collins Piper, Mark Anderson and Pat Shannan.

Produced by a supporter of AFP, the videos focus on a wide variety of issues and are designed to promote AFP and its populist and nationalist message to millions of people who access the Internet on a regular basis but who are not subscribers to the print edition.

Although formally posted on the Internet video site known as youtube.com (where they can be found by searching the term “afpsupporter”) the videos are also freely accessible by anyone who goes to the official AFP website at americanfreepress.net.

Why not check them out for yourself?

And if you like, you can attach them to your own emails and send them to friends and family who need to hear the message that these brief but informative videos impart.

Or, you can download them from your computer onto DVD and send them to people by regular mail.

In addition, there are other special videos—from other sources—that we know that you’ll also find interesting.

Here’s a listing of some of the special AFP video presentations that have been posted:

- Bilderberg Exposed: AFP Managing Editor Jim Tucker talks about the secretive Bilderberg group.
- Bilderberg Found: Jim Tucker returns to describe how Bilderberg tried to hide its whereabouts this year. Although a phony story was floated saying that Bilderberg had already met in Greece, Tucker tracked Bilderberg down right in the D.C. area.
- John McCain’s Ties to Organized Crime: Michael Collins Piper outlines the little-known link of the Republican presidential candidate’s family.
- The Trilateral Commission: AFP Correspondent Michael Collins Piper explores the history of David Rockefeller’s foreign policy pressure group.
- New Call to Impeach Bush: AFP Correspondent Mark Anderson describes a new effort by a New Hampshire state legislator.
- Pat Shannan Speaks: Pat talks about the media’s efforts to suppress major news stories, including the insurgent “Ron Paul Revolution.”
- Michael Collins Piper Responds to Supporters of Israel: The AFP correspondent takes on his critics who object to Piper’s criticisms of Israel’s efforts to drive the United States into a war against Iran.

GLOBAL WARMING AND OTHER FRAUDS EXPOSED

The Chicken Little Agenda: Debunking Experts’ Lies

The sky is not falling—the global greenhouse is not out of control, the ozone layer is still there and the Cold War is really over. Finally, a book that contradicts the “Chicken Little” mentality by arguing that most of these concerns are scare tactics used to persuade the ordinary citizen. The Chicken Little Agenda: Debunking Experts’ Lies examines the overriding issues of today’s gloomy view, providing detailed insight into what is really happening in the world. By utilizing documented scientific evidence, Dr. Robert G. Williscroft presents alternative views to those of the doomsayers. Dr. Williscroft effectively:

- Exposes the Green Revolution to reveal the hidden agenda that empowers environmental extremists.
- Reveals serious misconceptions about Three Mile Island and Chernobyl and provides a strong case for nuclear energy.
- Gives insight into the role of terrorism and recounts the scare tactics used to invoke fear.
- Details government intrusions into the daily lives of ordinary citizens and demonstrates how to make the system work for you.

Williscroft’s eclectic interests and broad experience, ranging from the intricate programming of nuclear-weapon delivery systems to the implementation of sophisticated databases for atmospheric research, have prepared him to drop The Chicken Little Agenda on the spin doctors who terrify the general public with their dire predictions of imminent disaster.

A successful author and pioneer, Williscroft served for 23 years with the U.S. Navy and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. He has a BS in oceanography and meteorology and has a Master’s Degree in engineering.

The Chicken Little Agenda (hardback, dustjacket, 256 pages, #CLA, $26; $23 for members of the AFP READERSHIP COUNCIL) is available from FIRST AMENDMENT BOOKS, 645 Pennsylvania Avenue SE, Suite 100, Washington, D.C. 20003. U.S. Leaders Have Abandoned 'Spirit of 1776'

On July 4, 1776, a courageous group of patriots decided that they had no other choice but to declare their independence—the independence of the American colonies from a despotic British sovereign, King George III.

Authored by the brilliant populist Thomas Jefferson, the Declaration of Independence states:

“When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the Earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature’s God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

“We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. That whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundations on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness.

“Prudence, indeed, will dictate that governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shewn, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such government, and to provide new guards for their future security.—Such has been the patient sufferance of these colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former systems of government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute tyranny over these states.”

Jefferson then enumerates a bill of particulars including, among others, citing King George for failing to pass laws of immediate importance, not allowing the people to have representation in the legislature, calling legislative bodies at unusual and distant places, repeatedly dissolving representative houses, obstructing naturalization laws, placing judges under his will, opening new offices to harass the people, keeping standing armies in time of peace, quartering armed troops among the people, denying trial by jury, suspending legislatures, declaring the people out of his protection and waging war against them.

The colonies “have petitioned for redress in the most humble terms: Our repeated petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A prince, whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people,” wrote Jefferson.

In a letter to John Langdon Sept. 11, 1785, Jefferson wrote: “In spite of treaties, England is still our enemy. Her hatred is deep-rooted and cordial, and nothing is wanting with her but the power to wipe us and the land we live in, out of existence. Her interest, however, is her ruling passion; and the late American measures have struck at that so vitally . . . that a possibility seems to open of forming some arrangement.”

And then to William Carmichael on Dec. 11, 1787, Jefferson wrote: “I had never concealed from him [Mr. Eden, English ambassador] that I considered the British as our natural enemies, and as the only nation on Earth who wished us all dead, from the bottom of their souls.

And I am satisfied, that were our continent to be swallowed up by the ocean, Great Britain would be in bonfires from one end to the other.”

Let’s fast-forward to July 4, 2008. The United States has a military presence in 130 countries. In these we have 700 bases. Long ago commencing with our involvement in WWI we began our international meddling at the behest of Britain. During WWII we again came to the aid of Britain and were well on the way to becoming the lone superpower that we are today.

FDR bullied Congress into seeing the necessity of war, which would save our poor economy. In hindsight, full employment in war industries and a military draft brought an artificial sense of prosperity. The New Deal became Harry Truman’s Fair Deal and the UN came together with American internationalists who fathered the Korean War, the Vietnam War, moving right along to our invasion and occupation of Iraq. Our expensive ally in the Middle East—Israel—wants us to supply her with the war materiel and logistical support for the bombing and invasion of Iran.

If that scenario comes to fruition, keen observers predict that the entire Middle East will explode and the consequences for the United would be nothing short of devastating.

At this writing the November presidential election has been decided: either McCain or Obama. What remains is for the public to dutifully march to the polling places and approve the Establishment’s anointed candidates.

What America needs is a “Magnificent Populist” to lead the people. He might be out there somewhere. His name might be Ron Paul. It’s not too late, but time is getting short. ★

Voters Hold Power Over 'Lawmakers'

Thank God that I never had to go to sea in World War II or the Korean War with Democrats or Republicans. All of my shipmates were Americans.

As one of the organizers of "The Committee to Defeat Howard Baker" after 68 U.S. senators, on April 18, 1978 voted to surrender the Panama Canal to Omar Torrijos, we successfully defeated five of them in their next primaries, and 20 of them (including Robert Morgan of North Carolina) in their next general elections and convinced eight others that they should retire. Thirty-three out of 68 is not a bad score.

It will be quicker and easier with the House of Representatives. While senators have six-year terms, representatives have two-year terms. Remember that only a third of the senate and the entire House are up for election every two years.

The present Congress, with a few outstanding exceptions, has ignored its oversight responsibilities and dishonored their oaths of office.

So, our battle cry is "Impeach Bush now, or come November and throw all of the incumbents out—Democrats and Republicans." We must rally to our citizenship responsibilities as did our forefathers in 1776.

RON PAUL CAN STILL MAKE AN IMPACT

I'm having a hard time subscribing to Ron Paul's new Campaign for Liberty. He promised us he would take the presidential contest all the way to the convention. How can he now, with but a couple of months to go, renege on that promise? I'm not asserting that Paul can win. I only want him to show up with his delegates at the door of the convention hall as a fully qualified contender for the presidency.

Should security guards block him from the hall, he could make a wonderful speech right there on the lawn.

It's crucial that he be there and not off some distance away conducting just one more freedom rally. I've been going to patriotic freedom rallies since 1980.

WHAT HATH BUSH WROUGHT?

President George W. Bush has at long last decided he wants Osama bin Laden captured. Isn't it kind of late to make that level of "executive decision" after invading both Iraq and Afghanistan, with ulterior motives decided even before the so-called 9-11 attack?

Now that the United States (primarily) has destroyed an infrastructure we helped put in place when both Saddam Hussein and Osama bin Laden were our friends, and has spent lives and wealth to restore parts of the infrastructure of both countries with no end in sight to either the military fighting or the "nation building," is it not time to reexamine our policy of pre-emptive, aggressive war, and take on some nation that can fight back effectively?

That done, should we should then put Mr. Bush in the front lines to take the brunt of the fighting, even though the war was not his to decide?

WHO'S TO BLAME FOR OIL PRICES?

All the AFP stories and letters about oil ignore the basic facts. The world knows that it takes hundreds of millions of years to make oil and that it was using the easy way to obtain oil at first.

This meant that one day the cost of obtaining oil would start to rise sharply pushing the price up just as sharply.

Although the world has consistently drilled for oil only about 100 years, I am guessing that it has already used about 8.3 million times the amount of petroleum it was entitled to.

If people want someone to blame for prices they just need to look in a mirror.

People need to remember that oil is gasoline, jet fuel, plastic and is connected to just about everything.

Think about it.

ROGER HAWKINS
Pennsylvania

CONGRESS IS THE CULPRIT

People are blaming the oil companies for high gas prices. We are awash in oil, but Congress refuses to allow drilling in the huge tracts offshore and in Alaska. Congress is the culprit, not the oil companies.

There is nothing in the Constitution that authorizes Congress to meddle in our marvelous free market system that was working very well without federal interference. However, massive interference has stifled not only production of oil but also nuclear power.

In addition, Congress is legislating in areas unauthorized by the Constitution. Foreign aid and regulation of education are just two of many examples.

In areas where Congress is authorized, it has created several major disasters. Our military is dispersed in many countries around the world, but it is not protecting our southern border to keep out illegals.

In addition, Congress has surrendered its power to declare war to the president.

We must demand that Congress obey the Constitution or we soon will see the destruction of our nation.

MCCAIN THE WARMONGER

Sen. John McCain scares me. He has no problem with the no-win war in Iraq. It wouldn't bother him if the war lasted for another 100 years. But worse than that is his fear of Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad and his own substitute for diplomacy: Bomb, bomb, bomb, bomb, bomb Iran. McCain may or may not be a screwball, but one thing is certain: he is a warmonger.

BORDER WALL A BIG SUCCESS?

The $2 million per mile border wall has been declared a success by Arizona ranchers and the Border Patrol. It keeps cattle from crossing the border without obstructing Mexican children, old men and pregnant women who wish to cross for medical treatment at U.S. taxpayer expense, just as our government planned it. It is predicted that the cost to maintain the wall will eventually exceed its original cost to build. Each criminal alien caught is allowed amnesty for the first 15 arrests, but the 16th arrest could lead to prosecution for illegal entry.

Tell me what is wrong with this picture?

GRAIN-BASED CURRENCY

I commend the insight of the recent letter writers who have suggested a grain-based currency. Reserves of grain, our most staple food, would provide far more security than gold, during hard times. It is also much more cumbersome for crooks to steal and hide.

How I would love to fire those prophets of usury at our national Bank of Canada, board up the windows and fill those august chambers with golden wheat, the tenancy of which would so much better serve the interests of my countrymen. I would encourage all Americans to consecrate the offices of the Federal Reserve Banks also to this higher purpose.

Incidentally, AFP keeps getting better and better. Thank you and God bless you for working so hard.

The Greatest Threat to Our Civil Liberties Is Yoo

JOHN YOO STANDS OUTSIDE the Anglo-American legal tradition. His views lead to self-incrimination wrung out of a victim by torture. He believes a president of the United States can initiate war, even on false pretenses, and then use the war he starts as cover for depriving U.S. citizens of habeas corpus protection. A U.S. attorney general informed by Yoo's memos even went so far as to tell the Senate Judiciary Committee that the Constitution does not provide habeas corpus protection to U.S. citizens.

Yoo's animosity to U.S. civil liberties made him a logical choice for appointment to the Bush regime's Department of Justice (sic), but his appointment as a law professor at the University of California-Berkeley shatters that university's liberal image.

Habeas corpus is a centuries-old British legal reform that stopped authorities from arbitrarily throwing a person into a dungeon and leaving him there forever without presenting charges in a court of law. Without this protection, there can be no liberty.

Yoo is especially adamant that "enemy combatants" have no right to challenge the legality of their detention by U.S. authorities before a federal judge. Yoo would have us believe that the detainees at Guantanamo, for example, are all terrorists who were attacking Americans. Nothing could be further from the truth.

The question is whether any of the detainees are "enemy combatants." Yoo would have it so because the president says it is so. As the president has already decided, what is the sense of presenting evidence to a judge? For Yoo, accusation by the executive branch is the determination of guilt.

But what we know about the detainees is that many are hapless individuals who were captured by warlords and sold to the Americans for the bounty that the U.S. government offered for "terrorists."

Some of the other detainees could be Taliban who were engaged in an Afghan civil war that had nothing whatsoever to do with the United States. The Taliban was not fighting the United States until the United States invaded Afghanistan and began attacking the Taliban. This would make Taliban detainees prisoners of war captured by invading U.S. troops. How POWs can be tortured, denied Geneva Conventions protections and tried by military tribunals without the U.S. government being in violation of U.S. and international law is inexplicable.

Would you consider it just if you were detained in Gitmo, undergoing whatever abuse is dished out, for five or six years of your life, or forever, without your family knowing what has become of you?

Perhaps the greatest injustice was done to John Walker Lindh, an American citizen who, like Americans of a previous generation who fought in the Spanish Civil War, was fighting for the Taliban in the Afghan civil war against the Northern Alliance. Suddenly, the Americans entered the Afghan war on the side of the Northern Alliance. Lindh was captured and sentenced to 20 years in prison. This kind of punishment is a new form of tyranny. It is not law, and it is not justice.

Lindh had no opportunity to withdraw once the United States entered on the opposite side. The only point of treating Lindh as if he were some dangerous traitor was to demonstrate that American citizens can be treated to a Kafka-type experience and have the American public accept it.

Yoo stands for the maximum amount of injustice, illegality and unconstitutionality that can be committed in the name of the national security state.

No American security was at stake in Afghanistan or in Iraq, and none is at stake in Iran today. The Bush regime may be creating security problems for Americans in the future by fomenting hatred of Americans among Muslims. This security problem is insignificant compared to the threat to our liberty and freedom posed by Yoo and his Republican Federalist Society colleagues, who are committed to tyranny in the name of "energy in the executive."

Writing on the Wall Street Journal editorial page on June 17, Yoo denounced the five Supreme Court justices who defended the U.S. Constitution against arbitrary "energy in the executive."

Yoo believes that the Constitution and liberty rank below "the nation's security." Fortunately, Yoo wrote, a fix is at hand. "The advancing age of several justices" means that President McCain can give us more judges like John Roberts (no relation) and Samuel Alito, who will make certain that mere civil liberties don't get in the way of arbitrary executive power justified by national security.

In a Yoo-McCain regime, the terrorists you will have to fear are those in your own government, against whom you will have no protection whatsoever. ★

PIECE OF MIND FROM CHARLEY REESE

Who's Telling Obama What to Think?

Barack Obama has run from the Rev. Jeremiah Wright, from his own church, from Louis Farrakhan and from the Palestinians. He has allowed the Rulers of the Politically Correct to dictate his own thinking. I suggest that he join the liberal wing of the Episcopal Church.

The rulers of the PC Gospel—mostly members of the media—have decreed that anyone with whom they disagree must be banished from the public realm.

Not everyone is as cowardly as Sen. Obama. When the American media tried to get Archbishop Desmond Tutu to denounce Fidel Castro, Rev. Tutu told them quite quickly and bluntly that they do not get to choose his enemies or his friends. He refused to criticize Castro because Cuba had assisted in the overthrow of South Africa's apartheid government.

The fly in the thinking of the rulers of political correctness is that they ignore the basic truth that in a free society, people may disagree.

I like Reverend Wright, and I respect Louis Farrakhan. Some things they say I agree with. Some things they say I disagree with. That puts them on a par with my late wife. We didn't always agree with each other, but that didn't stop us from caring for each other.

Where in the Bill of Rights does it say that some ideas cannot be spoken or believed? Where does it say that people who speak certain thoughts are to be condemned and shunned? PC is BS. The PC rulers are little fascists who think they can browbeat everyone into conforming to their own narrow view of the world. And they don't use reason. They name-call and play the guilt-by-association game. What they'd like to do is get the government to put people who disagree with them in prison.

Don't scoff. In some European countries, if you express doubt about some detail of the official Holocaust story, you can be charged with a crime and sent to prison. That is a shameful situation, for the truth doesn't need to be guarded by the police. It's a warning that the right of free speech is always in danger from those who believe they have a monopoly on the truth and who prefer character assassination to reason and debate.

Obama has succumbed to the poison that infects all ambitious politicians. He tells himself he can't do all the good things he wants to do unless he first gets elected. Then he starts compromising and pandering. By the time he gets elected—if he does—he won't be the same man.

Obama should have said: (1) "I'm not responsible for anything somebody else says"; (2) "I don't agree with everything Reverend Wright says"; and (3) "But I still respect him and consider him a friend. If that doesn't suit you, then get out of my face and vote for someone else." Then he should have refused to ever again answer any questions about Reverend Wright.

Farrakhan deserves respect because the Nation of Islam's message is as sound as a $20 gold piece: Get off drugs and alcohol, respect and take care of your wife and children, and get a job. The Million Man March that he organized did more to reduce crime during the crack wars than anything the Justice Department has done. He is, by the way, the only man in America who can get a million people to turn out for an event.

If he wishes to think that I'm a devil because of the color of my skin, it's OK with me. I don't want to be his buddy. I just want to give him credit for the good that he does.

As for Obama, he will learn the hard way that pressure never lets up, and the more he caves in, the more those who want to control his mind will be encouraged to try even harder. I'm reminded of the Biblical saying, "What good does it do to gain the whole world if you lose your soul?" ★

“Honey Bees Still Vanishing Overnight”

Massive Royal Jelly Shortage Creates Rare Opportunity!

Newly Discovered Supply Of 100% American Royal Jelly Now Available Until Supplies Run Out...

by Mike Walters
Consumer Reporter
7:22 A.M. Friday

was dispelled when Leonard, a French scientist, discovered that royal jelly is secreted by special glands located in the head of worker bees whose job it is to nurse the queen bee.

Intrigued by the strange longevity and extraordinary sexual powers of the queen bee, leading scientists in France, Germany, Mexico, Italy, Canada and the U.S. have been trying to discern the secret substance in royal jelly that prolongs the youth of the Queen bee.

Queens Live 52 Times Longer!

It's not surprising that royal jelly has attracted medical attention throughout the world. It's the diet of the queen bee in which lies the secret of the difference between her and the rest of the hive. Here's the remarkable truth: the queen bee lives to six years, where the 20 to 40 thousand worker bees and a few hundred drones live only a few short months!

The queen bee's larvae looks like all the rest of the worker bees. But only SHE is fertile, producing some 400,000 eggs each year. Her only food is ROYAL JELLY, secreted from the glands of worker bees. The composition of royal jelly is still not well understood. However, the “miracle food” effects are more easily explained by its remarkable ingredients.

For example, royal jelly is one of the few truly safe hormone foods. These “good hormones” are known to exert profound actions at the cellular level. It is listed as the richest bio-available source of vitamins like pantothenic acid, riboflavin and biotin. It's an excellent source of amino acids, neurotransmitters and immunoglobins which are found in no other food. A rare collagen-like substance is also present in royal jelly which might explain its beautifying powers.

Royal Jelly may be the most nutritionally dense food ever discovered and is considered a universal “broad spectrum” tonic. It also contains beneficial enzymes, amino acids, hydroxyl acids, collagen precursors and an amazing array of trace minerals.

One very interesting compound, found only in royal jelly, is a fatty acid called 10-HDA. Only young bees produce 10-HDA in their mandibular glands and it's the single most active compound in royal jelly. In fact, it's so powerfully potent and active, if I explained to you in print what the research actually reveals about 10-HDA... it would be considered a drug!

Research On Royal Jelly

• Cornell University... “Chickens fed royal jelly laid twice as many eggs as the others, and even the older hens on retirement started laying eggs again.”

• James F. Balch M.D.... “Royal jelly is known to aid in liver disease, pancreatitis, insomnia, stomach ulcers, kidney disease, bone fractures and skin disorders, and as a potentiater for the immune system.”

“Queen honey bees might hold the key to a longer life for humans. The common worker bee lives just six weeks, but if the same egg was raised as a queen bee, the queen can live for up to six years.”

If you have ever wanted to take advantage of a unique situation and profit from “insider” information... you now may have a very real chance to do it. Here is why:

There now exists a new royal jelly compound so powerful, so effective, so relentless in its awesome attack on the effects of aging that it has virtually eliminated the need to “slow down” when you become older. Word of this new “golden” royal jelly is sweeping the country. The product is called Gelacine-Gold and it's dynamite! In fact, thousands of people will now get a chance to feel it work first hand.

Royal jelly is totally unlike honey and has baffled scientists since the 1900's. In 1894 some of the mystery

If you do a simple Google search on royal jelly you will also find some very interesting things...

- Anti-fatigue effect of fresh royal jelly in mice
- A royal jelly as a new potential immunomodulator in rats and mice
- Effect of royal jelly on serum lipids in experimental animals and humans with atherosclerosis
- The role of apitherapy in the combined treatment of patients with chronic non-specific lung diseases
- Effects of lyophilized royal jelly on experimental hyperlipidemia and thrombosis
- Augmentation of wound healing by royal jelly (RJ) instreptozotocin-diabetic rats
- Anti-tumor effects of royal jelly
- Traditional remedies and food supplements. A 5-year toxicological study (1991-1995)
- A potent anti-bacterial protein in royal jelly. Purification and determination of the primary structure of royalisin.

If that weren't enough... according to Rita Elkins, M.A., author of “Bee Pollen, Royal Jelly, Propolis and Honey, “there are many uses for Royal Jelly as a medicinal treatment for a wide range of illnesses and conditions.” Some are listed below: (This is NOT a list of claims or promises to cure ANY diseases. Rather, it is a catalog of traditional and historical uses for this very remarkable substance mentioned in Rita's book and others)

Menopause Related Symptoms	Infertility
Chronic Fatigue	Skin Blemishes and Wrinkles
Immune System Stimulant	Viral and Bacterial Infections
Endocrine System Disorders	Hormonal Imbalances
Coronary Artery Disease	High Cholesterol Levels
High Blood Pressure	Weight Control
Broken or Weak Bones	Retarded Growth
Bladder Infections	Wound Healing
Anemia	Inflammation
Liver Ailments	Cancer
Arthritis	Impaired Memory
Depression	Panic or Anxiety Attacks
Parkinson's Disease	Diabetes

Disappearing Bees Create Massive Royal Jelly Shortage!

Recently you may have read or watched reports on television describing how the U.S. has lost over 50% of its bee colonies due to some unexplained mystery. This is creating severe shortages on the U.S. royal jelly supplies. My sources tell me that there might not be empty shelves right away. Rather, what you should expect to see is quality beginning to suffer as producers become tempted with “jelly laundering” by mixing cheap royal jelly with quality to maintain supplies and profit margins. What does all this mean? It means that I would advise anyone interested in authentic royal jelly to buy high potency jelly while you still can!

Warning! Warning! Warning!

Most doctors, pharmacists and government people think taking any kind of royal jelly is just plain stupid and a waste of time. So... Solutions From Science can't (and doesn't) make ANY health or healing claims for generic royal jelly or even our new high potency product... Gelacine-Gold. Heck, if you're sick, you should go to the doctor and see what's wrong. So don't try to cure yourself with royal jelly...OK?

Most Royal Jelly Shipped Secretly From Communist China!

Believe it or not, almost all royal jelly sold in the U.S. comes from China. The reason is price as you might imagine. Slave labor you see, produces a very low cost royal jelly which is marketed by most firms here in America. But there is good news. There is now a new royal jelly product that is produced here in America that is being sold to U.S. residents only. It's called Gelacine-Gold and it is being sold on a very unusual basis. Each jar comes with a certificate documenting the products purity and its U.S. origin.

Company Offers Extraordinary Guarantee!

Solutions From Science is the only company in the United States authorized to sell Gelacine-Gold. They have examined the data and believe it to be the finest available in the world. They don't care if you have tried other royal jelly before and found no benefit. They have documented the results of skeptical people who now swear by Gelacine-Gold. Solutions From Science means it when they say Gelacine-Gold can help.

In fact, as proof they believe Gelacine-Gold is everything they say it is, they offer an extraordinary guarantee, one they would not dare make if they had a single doubt about the amazing properties of Gelacine-Gold.

If you tried other royal jelly before and found no real benefits, you no longer have an excuse. Ordering Gelacine-Gold is simple, fast and reliable! Here's how to order. First...

“I have never seen anything like it,” one professional beekeeper said from an orchard here beginning to bloom. “Hive after hive, up to 70 percent of my bees are gone. They just vanished.”

Don't Pay Anything Now!

Solutions From Science doesn't want you to pay anything for this amazing compound until... after you have already started to experience the full effects.. Here's what they mean by that: All you have to do is place your order and, they will ship you the product immediately... but they will NOT process your credit card for at least 30 days! That means if you are not getting all the benefits from Gelacine-Gold you want... as fast as you want... all you have to do is send the bottles back and...

Your Credit Card Charge Will Be Destroyed Without... Ever Being Processed!

If you would rather order by sending them a check or money order, simply send a check...

Postdated 30 Days Later!

Why is Solutions From Science doing this? Because they don't want to deposit a single penny of your money until you have had a chance to see for yourself just how different Gelacine-Gold really is from lesser quality, lower potency royal jellies.

Does that sound strange to you? I'm sorry if it does but, no matter what... they intend to treat you like they would like to be treated. In other words, they think you deserve to be able to try Gelacine-Gold before you allow them to process your credit card or cash your check.

Special Offer For American Free Press Readers!

High potency Gelacine-Gold carries a suggested retail price of $49.95 per bottle which contains 90 capsules. However, American Free Press readers now have the following supply options: Good Deal: $29.95 for a full 30 day supply. Better Deal: $74.95 for a 90 day supply (3 bottles). Best Deal: Buy it wholesale. The “case cost” for 12 bottles is just $179.97 ($15.00 per bottle)

No matter what quantity you order, you must add $9.95 per order for shipping and handling.

Please don't wait to order. Every day, high potency royal jelly supplies in the U.S. are shrinking.
